THE WEEKLY NEWSLETTER OF THOMAS JEFFERSON SCHOOL OF LAW

Another Successful PILF Annual "Silent Auction Extraordinaire"

PILF's Annual "Silent Auction Extraordinaire" was a success once again this year.

The Public Interest Law Foundation event, held on the second floor foyer Friday, April 13, drew a great crowd of bidders and had a very festive atmosphere.

Among the silent auction items were Bowling with Professors Golden, Semeraro, Kreit, and Dean Mitnick; Wine and Cheese with Professors Bisom-Rapp, Durst, and Herrera; Lunch with Professors Delman and Markey; and other really fun-sounding professor donations.

This year, once again, the live auctioneer was the inimitable Professor Thom Golden, who put some great items up for bid, such as tickets to see rocker Chris Isaak, Padres Field Level tickets, Symphony tickets, Del Mar racing passes, a Hornblower Cruise and a lot more.

PILF also handed out several awards, including special recognition for the San Diego Volunteer Lawyer Program, the Legal Aid Society and the Family Justice Center. Also, a special award went to Professor Marybeth Herald for all her hard work and support on behalf of PILF.

PILF organizers say the event raised at least $10,000 and proceeds from the annual auction go directly to a scholarship fund, which then assists students in their unpaid pursuit of summer public interest internships in public interest law. Most of these internships are unpaid, and we would like to be able to provide our students with funding to live while engaging in this work.

"This year's auction was a great success," said PILF President Stephanie Lamson 2L. "We are truly thankful for everyone who made it out.... especially making it in the rain! It was wonderful to see our months of hard work pay off and come together into one fun and lively event. We are incredibly thankful for the generous donations from our students, faculty, and local community. Many thanks also deserve to go out to our wonderful PILF volunteers and TJSL events staff who made the event itself possible."

Successful Immigration Law Society Panel

By Adrianna Maldonado

On April 12, the Immigration Law Society, along with the American Immigration Lawyers Association (AILA), held a career panel. The panelists included Diana Velos Coker, Esq., Tammy Lin, Esq., Nikki Weil, Esq., and TJSJ Adjunct Professor Samuel W. Bettwy, Esq. They shared their experiences in private, non-profit and solo practice of Immigration law.

Diana Vellos Coker is a partner with Larrabee Mehlman Albi Coker LLP in San Diego. Her practice focuses on business immigration law for the high-tech, pharmaceutical/biotech and health care industries.

Tammy Lin is the Immigration Attorney for Jewish Family Service (JFS) of San Diego's Prins Asylum Program. JFS, established in 1918, is a social service agency assisting in the resettlement of refugees to the San Diego community and affiliated with the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society (HIAS), one of the oldest international migration and resettlement agencies in the United States.

Nikki Weil is a recent TJSJ grad who runs a solo practice focused on business and family immigration matters. She handles asylum cases pro bono and consistently lobbies members of congress on civil rights issues, including immigration.

Professor Samuel W. Bettwy is an Assistant United States Attorney for the Southern District of California, specializing in immigration law and civil litigation since 1989. He also currently teaches Immigration Law at TJSJ.

In addition to their practice experience, the panelists also shared how AILA has been an ongoing help during their practice. AILA has developed a student chapter and encourages law students interested in Immigration law to join. The program will include education in Immigration law as well as a student-attorney mentorship program. For more information, log onto <http://www.aila.org>.

TJSL's Adjunct Faculty Honored

Two longtime TJSL adjunct professors were honored at the Adjunct Faculty Reception on April 3 in the 8th floor board room. The event honors the law school's invaluable adjunct faculty, all of whom are or have been practicing attorneys.

Professor Richard Muir was honored as the 2011 Adjunct Professor of the Year and, because last year's event was postponed due to construction at the new campus, Professor Mike Martindill was named Adjunct Professor of the year for 2010.

Professor Martindill, who has been an adjunct at TJSL since 1984, said: "It's an honor because I've had a lot of rewarding experiences while teaching over the years."

Professor Muir, who has done two stints as an adjunct, one in the 80's and the second beginning in 1994, said, "This feels good. I like to think I have an impact on students. Some students who were not interested in criminal law told me that after taking my class they were very interested in criminal law. That's very rewarding."

He also said that he once ran into an attorney who was former student at the Vista Courthouse and the student told him "I still remember the rules you taught me."

Dean Rudy Hasl and Associate Dean for Academic Affairs Eric Mitnick both praised the adjuncts for their dedication and their vital importance to the academic program at the law school.

The event was catered by the Indigo Café, and the adjuncts and full-time professors had a chance to visit with each other in a festive and relaxing atmosphere.

Paradise Plundered Authors Speak at TJSL

An event at Thomas Jefferson School of Law on April 10 was something like a town hall meeting - it was presented by TJSL's Center for Law and Social Justice and the Center on Policy Initiatives.

A group of citizens and students gathered to hear two of the three authors of Paradise Plundered, a book that details the fiscal crisis and its effects on the governance of the city of San Diego.

"We are the Rodney Dangerfield of cities," said Steve Erie, a UC San Diego political science professor and one of the authors. "We get no respect," he added, referring to the years of fiscal mismanagement in San Diego during the past 15 years. That led San Diego to be dubbed by the media as "Enron by the Sea."

Erie and his co-author, Vladimir Kogan, a graduate student at UC San Diego, laid out the history of the fiscal crisis - which basically boils down to the mis-handling by city government of the pension system, which created huge deficits through underfunding.

One reason for the crisis is that city fathers have been loath to raise taxes. "San Diego has been known as an anti-tax hotbed from way back," Erie said. "We are the poster child for Prop 13," the property tax initiative passed by California voters in 1978.

The authors pointed out how service levels have been declining in San Diego for years. For example, the ratio of police officers to citizens does not compare favorably to other cities of San Diego's size, in Erie's opinion. And, he says our fire department is not accredited because we have too few fire stations for a city our size.

"Why is the quality of life declining so rapidly in San Diego," asked Kogan. "You can't understand the fiscal crisis without understanding the pension crisis. Fifteen years ago, San Diego was spending just five percent of the budget on pensions. Now it's 20 percent."

Kogan went over a history of the pension crisis from its roots in the era of Mayor Pete Wilson in the early 1980s. Basically, the city got its union employees to work for less in return for promises of better benefits down the road - lower pay today, larger pensions later. The city even pulled them out of Social Security and enrolled them in the pension plan. Trouble is, the city didn't fund the pension plan adequately, according to Kogan.

Now there is a ballot measure that would put new employees in a 401K plan instead of a pension plan - but Kogan and Erie say it will cost the city even more.

Before and after the presentation, Erie and Kogan signed copies of their book.

TJSL Competes at the Traynor Moot Court Competition in Berkley, CA

By Sevy Fisher 2L

Wow, what an experience. Our first morning started out by being judged by an appellate court justice of the California Court of Appeals, as well as two certified appellate lawyers. Our 2nd round was judged by three certified appellate lawyers, and a civil plaintiff's attorney. Both rounds were great and full of difficult questions from the judges. You could tell they knew their stuff and, since it was a case about hot coffee similar to the famous McDonald's case, the judges were very skeptical and full of critical questions.

As a team, Teresa Gutierrez and I did very well, and I think we were just as good as anybody there. However, these competitions do take a bit of luck because not all judges can see all of the competitors. The 2 teams that went on to the finals were very well poised and did a very good job, especially the respondent's side (although they lost). We went back to watch the final round to show our sportsmanship, and to see the other teams arguments. The final round was judged by quite a trio. It was an incredible experience getting to listen to advice from a California Supreme Court Justice, and two very knowledgeable Court of Appeals Justices. All three had a very long list of credentials, and were three of the smartest people I have ever listened to.

Although we did not win this particular competition, we learned a lot about being appellate attorneys and got another experience in thinking on our feet. It is not always the end result but the process that makes you who you are. We had a great time and got to argue in front of intelligent people, an experience that most people will never get to have in their lives.

The competition took place on April 14 and 15.

Professor Greenberg Speaks on Intersexuality at UCSD's Osher Institute

On April 3, TJSJ Professor Julie Greenberg delivered a talk at UC San Diego's Osher Institute, titled, "What Makes a Man a Man and a Woman a Woman?"

The title came from a Texas court that recently posed the following question: "When is a man a man and when a woman is a woman?" According to the court, "every school child, even of tender years, is confident he or she can tell the difference, especially if the person is wearing no clothes." Yet when a person who was dressed as a woman, had the breasts, hormones, and genitalia of a woman, and whom every school child would identify as a woman presented herself to the Texas court, the court decided that she was legally a man.

In her presentation, Professor Greenberg discussed how medical and legal authorities determine a person's sex for purposes of marriage, custody, identity documents, housing, bathroom and locker room use and athletics. "Sex determinations have profound medical, legal, and psychological effects on the millions of people who are born with an intersex condition or are transgender," said Professor Greenberg.

Professor Greenberg noted that the audience of more than 100 people engaged in a lively discussion about the importance of sex and gender in our society.

Professor Greenberg is an internationally recognized expert on the legal issues relating to gender, sex, sexual identity and sexual orientation. Her path-breaking work on gender identity has been cited by a number of state and federal courts, as well as courts in other countries. Her work has been quoted in hundreds of books and articles and she has been invited to speak at dozens of national and international conferences on the subject.

Professor Cohn's United States and Torture Released in Paperback

Professor Cohn's widely praised book, The United States and Torture (NYU Press) has just come out in paperback. She is the editor and co-author of a collection of chapters on U.S. practices, including waterboarding, sleep deprivation, sensory manipulation and other enhanced interrogation techniques.

"I hope this book will be of interest to readers who seek to learn about the cruelty our government has visited upon others under the guise of national security," said Professor Cohn, who gave a presentation on her book at the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee on April 12, along with an interview on Wisconsin Public Radio April 10 and an April 13 appearance at Marquette.

The recent announcement of impending military trials in Guantanamo of long-term detainees, and the suppressed torture memo just disclosed, makes Professor Cohn's presentation and interview even more timely.

"At both University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and Marquette Law School, I encountered thoughtful and curious folks who are concerned about what their government has done in their name," said Professor Cohn. "A female student asked me, 'Tell me what I have to do to be you.'"

According to NYU Press: "Torture has been a topic of national discussion ever since it was revealed that 'enhanced interrogation techniques' had been authorized as part of the war on terror. The United States and Torture provides us with a larger lens through which to view America's policy of torture, one that dissects America's long relationship with interrogation and torture, which roots back to the 1950s and has been applied, mostly in secret, to 'enemies,' ever since.

The United States and Torture opens with a compelling preface by Sister Dianna Ortiz, who describes the unimaginable treatment she endured in Guatemala in 1987 at the hands of the Guatemalan government, which was supported by the United States. Following Ortiz's preface, an interdisciplinary panel of experts offers one of the most comprehensive examinations of torture to date, beginning with the Cold War era and ending with today's debate over accountability for torture.

Ultimately, this gripping, interdisciplinary work details the complicity of the United States government in the torture and cruel treatment of prisoners both at home and abroad and discusses what can be done to hold those who set the torture policy accountable."

Contributors to The United States and Torture include: Professor Cohn, Richard Falk, Marc D. Falkoff, Terry Lynn Karl, John W. Lango, Jane Mayer, Alfred W. McCoy, Jeanne Mirer, Sister Dianna Ortiz, Jordan J. Paust, Bill Quigley, Michael Ratner, Thomas Ehrlich Reifer, Philippe Sands, Stephen Soldz, and Lance Tapley.

Professor Zanville Addresses ABA on Transportation Law

TJSL Adjunct Professor Harry Zanville recently delivered an address to the American Bar Association Section on Labor and Employment Law Occupational Safety and Health Law Committee at its 2012 meeting in Sarasota, Florida. Nationally known for his expertise in the field of transportation law, Professor Zanville spoke about OSHA's enforcement of whistleblower laws in the railroad industry.

He was also honored last November by being named as a panelist for a BNA webinar addressing the legal implications of the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision in AT&T Mobility v. Conception.

A former consult for the U.S. Department of Justice, Professor Zanville teaches Arbitration, Negotiation Theory & Skills, and Transportation Law at TJSL.

Academic Support Program

- Each session will be one hour and fifteen minutes.
- Prior to the one-hour test, fifteen minutes will be devoted to receiving test taking tips from a different guest.
- Students will be required to come to the session with the test for the class they desire to take.
- APALSA, BLSA and La Raza will contact their professors and urge them to meet with the student about that particular test.

Date: Every Sunday @ 2:30PM

Room: 316

Every Sunday, APALSA, BLSA and La Raza will begin a collaborative Academic Support Program to assist TJSJL students who are looking to improve their test preparation and test taking skills. While many of our teachers stress taking practice exams, many of us do not take enough of them before midterms and finals.

Starting this Sunday, APALSA, BLSA and La Raza will be holding an exam session every week until midterms and then every week until finals. This is a great opportunity to enhance your test taking skills and improve your grades. Please be sure to take advantage and support APALSA, BLSA and La Raza's efforts.

Please contact Kim @ Buikt@tjssl.edu, Amber @ Nevadaan@tjssl.edu or Lance @ Henryl@tjssl.edu if you have any questions.
